KENTUCKY WEATHER REPORT.

What We May Expect Between This Time and To-morrow Evening.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU.

Fair Monday.
Special to THE PUBLIC LEDGER.

The above forecasts are made for a period of thirty-six hours, ending at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening.

A NEW-FASHIONED GILF.

Boston is nothing if not learned; as witness this from The Journal:
She'd a great and varied knowledge, picked up at a female college of quackeries, hydrostatics and pneumatics, very fast:
She was stuffed with erudition as you stuff a leather cushion, and the standards of the college and the knowledge of the past:
She had studied the old lexicons of Peruvians and Mexicans, their theology, anthropology, and geology over and over:
She knew the forms and features of the prehistoric creatures: ichthyosaurs, plesiosaurs, megalosaurus and many more:
She'd describe the ancient Tuscans and the Greeks and the Etruscans, their griddle and their kettles, and the victims that they gnawed:
She'd discuss the learned charmer, the theory of Ithaca, and the standards of the Vandals and the standards that they trod:
She knew all the mighty giants and the master minds of science; all the learning that was turning in the burning brain of man:
But she couldn't prepare a dinner for a guest and bring hungry sinners, nor get up a decent supper for her poor voracious papa, for she never was constructed on the old domestic plan.

DESTRUCTIVE WIND STORM

Sweeps Over the City and Surrounding Country Yesterday.

DOING MUCH DAMAGE IN PLACES.

Barns, Outbuildings, Fences, &c., Razed to Old Mother Earth.

Yesterday morning between nine and ten o'clock a part of Mason county was swept over by one of the severest wind storms ever experienced in her history. Barns, outbuildings, trees and fences were leveled in all directions.

It was shortly after nine o'clock when that looked like a harmless black cloud appeared in the West. It soon assumed an angry look and came on with astonishing velocity, breaking over the city almost without warning.

But very little damage was done in the city. The wire sign and weather-vane on top of the First National Bank were blown down, several windows were smashed and numerous fruit and shade trees and fences were more or less damaged.

A part of the coping was blown from Dodson's building on Second street and the fire wall on John N. Thomas's building on Market street was blown off.

The storm was most severe in the Washington neighborhood and was especially destructive to tobacco barns.

The cyclone, for such it seemed to be, forlaid in the Southern part of the county. It destroyed a tobacco barn belonging to Thomas Maler. Then a barn on Mrs. Julia Morgan's place, one of the largest in the county and containing about 20,000 pounds of tobacco, was completely demolished, the tobacco being scattered in every direction.

In W. R. Gill's woods, nearer Washington, no less than one hundred trees were blown down, some of them being torn by the roots.

Continuing, in turn the barns of R. P. Gault, John Armstrong, T. C. Campbell and H. F. Traxel were razed to the ground. Mr. Traxel's barn contained about 12,000 pounds of tobacco, which was badly damaged.

A barn of C. W. Forman's farm was slightly damaged, but not blown down.

In T. C. Campbell's grove, about a mile outside of the city, a number of trees were destroyed.

The storm's course was a zigzag one, but generally was Northwestward. It was accompanied by a heavy rain.

On Jersey and Tuckahoe ridges and near Fern Leaf tobacco was also created. A barn full of tobacco belonging to J. J. Thompson at Fern Leaf was blown down, and many outbuildings, fruit and forest trees were wrecked all over the neighborhood. In this section it is said to have been the hardest storm since 1840.

On Jersey Ridge, the tin roof of Thomas Carr's house was blown off and his barn damaged beyond repair. About a mile of fencing was also destroyed on his place.

The barn of John Brown was blown over on Tuckahoe Ridge, and the farmers of that neighborhood all report destruction to outbuildings, fences, &c.

The storm was equally severe across the river. In Abernethy, Basil Tolle's house was unroofed, and serious damage done to fencing and trees.

J. M. Bradford lost three barns on his place near Aberdeen and on S. Bradford's farm a barn and several outbuildings were destroyed.

George Brookover and P. N. Bradford lost two barns and on Andy Campbell's farm two barns were torn to pieces.

Several houses and barns are reported to be destroyed on Hickory Ridge.

A son of John Ennis was riding in a buggy which was overturned, but was not injured.

J. B. Boyes, living on the Fleming farm, reports the loss of several favorite fruit and shade trees.

Near Shannon, this county, the barn of Alexander Watson was blown over and a valuable horse killed. The barn of Henry Thomas of the same neighborhood was also destroyed.

Reports continue to come in from all quarters of more or less destruction, and not until all the surrounding country is heard from, can any estimate be made of the total amount of damage done.

Several minor storms occurred during the day.

Fortunately no report of any loss of life or of personal injury has been received.

THE CONFEDERATE TREASURY.

Lincoln's Brother-in-Law Tells How the Last of it Was Divided.

Atlanta Constitution.—Dr. C. R. C. Todd of Barwell, S. C., a distinguished Surgeon of the Confederate Army and a brother-in-law of Abraham Lincoln as well as a connection by marriage with the famous Breckinridge family of Kentucky. During his younger days he often threw in with Abraham Lincoln, who married his sister. Thus, by family ties and by association, he is closely connected with Breckinridge and Lincoln, who were both Presidential candidates in 1860.

Dr. Todd was in charge of the Confederate hospital at Charleston under General Hardee and was with the party of the fugitive Confederate cabinet when it disbanded. He describes the division of the last money of the Confederate Treasury, a matter much discussed in the newspapers a few years ago.

"A great deal has been said about it," said he, "but, so far as I know, no description of it is on record. I was there in the room when the money was paid out, and saw the whole proceeding. In fact, I am partly responsible for the division of it at the time. I had been in Ga. When we went down, and I heard the Kentucky and Virginia troops saying they were going to have some of the money or have blood. I told Breckinridge, who was the Secretary of War, what I had heard and said that there might be rioting and bloodshed."

"There may be rioting," said he, "but no bloodshed." I then suggested to him the propriety of a division of the money among the soldiers, and he replied: 'We will see about it.' In the party were the Confederate cabinet and the officers of the four brigades of troops which were with us when we crossed the Savannah river. We had the last money of the Confederate Treasury—$70,000 in gold and silver, besides some gold belonging to the Bank of Richmond. The money was in charge of Colonel Morgan, a brother of the famous John Morgan. We crossed the Savannah river on pontoons and went on the road towards Washington."

"In the morning we made two miles from the river we stopped at a log cabin on the South side of the road, and the $70,000 was paid out. Mr. Davis had gone on about four miles ahead of us with his staff."

"The cabin were John C. Breckinridge, Secretary of War, Judah P. Benjamin, who looked as scared as the devil and appeared to be panic stricken; Gen. Bragg, the commander of the four brigades, and Col. Morgan, who had charge of the money."

"The division was made by a caucus of the men. Those present were: Humphreys, DeBrell, Basil Duke and Van Hook's brigades. Marshall was then under arrest, and his brigade was in charge of Col. G. C. Breckinridge. The census of the soldiers was the reverse of Porter's. Some of the brigades returned fictitious names in order to get more money. The division was made by a rough estimate of the value of that gold and of the keg of silver and exchanged them. In that way I got some gold. Then they carried the Bank of Richmond money and deposited it. They took none of it except a little box, for which they substituted the keg of silver ingots. While the money was being divided out, Col. Morgan paid a man $5 a hour to guard the money. We got through Morgan took the remaining money and drove it away in the dark. Thence it landed in the bank at Washington, Ga. I know only by hearsay, but am satisfied that the information was correct, that the Bank of Richmond sent for its money, and on its way the men guarding it were attacked by marauders. The guard was temporarily dispersed, and the marauders got some of the money before they were driven off."

A COLLISION

On the Big Four Railroad Near Cleves, Ohio.

Five Train Men Killed and Others Seriously Injured.

A Change of Schedule the Primary Cause—Forgetting Order a Freight Train Runs Into an Accommodation Responding Parties Dead.

CINCINNATI, May 16.—A new time card. The freight was late. The crew forgot. These were the elements that made up one of the most disastrous accidents of the year in this section of the country. It occurred in a blinding rainstorm that occurred all things, at 8:16 Sunday morning, on the Big Four railroad, at the little village of Cleves, seventeen miles down the river.

It was a "head-on" collision between the Harrison and Lawrenceburg accommodation and the Indianapolis through freight. The wreck is one of the most complete of the kind upon this section for some time, but that feature and the monetary loss involved are least sight of in the terrible loss of human life, which was its most prominent attendant feature.

Five bodies—they were those of the crew—were so badly injured by side all day Sunday in the barn of Thomas Casey, the village undertaker, while far away the humble homes of the unfortunate victims lay in ruins with the widows of their terrible and untimely fate. Wives and fatherless children mourned the loss of the father and provider, with grief made yet more poignant by distance separated them from the corpses of their loved dead.

The following is the list of casualties: The killed—Newberry Edward, Greenburg; Philip Gibson, Lawrenceburg; Wm. Higgs, Greenburg; Hiram Bruce, Greenburg; John H. Darnall, Indianapolis. The injured—Conductor John Schroder, Lawrenceburg; Holton Terrell, Delhi; C. C. Hubler, Miami; George Mrs. Norton, North Bend.

While the curious but horrible village folk came and went about the dead-lane, a hundred strong men, assisted by the police, made a vain effort to remove the wreckage of the wreck to places.

Leslies those killed outright, two so badly injured that they can not live, while others escaped with injuries and bruises more or less serious. To add to the horror of the situation, the wreck took place in the ruins of the baggage car, and many who escaped would undoubtedly have been burned to death had not the rainstorm and the fact that the Cleveland department, their station is not far from the scene of the collision, and it was but a few minutes after the accident that the fire bell was sounded. This held the effort of bringing not only the fire engine and its crew, but also alarmed the village fire department, and they flocked to the scene and rendered valuable assistance in rescuing the imprisoned passengers and caring for the injured.

The collision was witnessed by several persons who beheld perhaps the most terrible scenes of their lives, but all agreed that the assistance in their power to the unfortunate.

THERE came near being a serious mishap with THE LEDGER Saturday. Just as the steam press was making its second revolution, one of the plate columns became detached from its base. The pool-room men of Covington do not like the idea of closing up while the Atlanta races are going on. They are talking over the matter. The intention was to close for the entire month, but now some of them want to let half the rooms stay open for two weeks and the others for the remaining two weeks. The pool room men are saying it is only a question of time when they will have to shut up shop permanently, anyway, and that they may as well make hay while they have a chance.

"An old restaurant full of care," says THE BOURBON NEWS "printed in Richmond, Va., in January, 1864, gives the following war-time prices in Confederate money: Soup $1.50, chicken $3.50, roast beef $3.50, ham and eggs $5, raw oysters $3, coffee $2, bread and butter $1.50, a bottle of champagne $50, a drink of rye whiskey $2, a bottle of ale, or a cigar $2." THE EDITOR OF THE LEDGER stopped at the Warren Green Hotel, Warrenton, Va., in November, 1862, and paid $34 a day for board with burnt rye for coffee, and no salt or shortening in the bread. The genial landlord said Confederate money was good enough for him, and he refused greenbacks. As almost everyone had a saddlebag full of Confed scrip there was not much trouble in paying the bills.

On and after July 1st, paid bills will be inserted in THE LEDGER at 25 cents per line for each insertion.
